

April 5, 2010 – Grand Rapids, MI

Veggies 101

After Saturday's message on the Vitamin Scam, I thought it was time to add to our repertoire of how to get to and maintain a healthy weight; I think it's time to talk about (DUH, duh, duhhhhhhhhh...) vegetables.

I get so many complaints from about spouses, especially men, who aren't willing to eat vegetables. They may choke down some peas or corn, potatoes are good, but that's about it. I wonder why that is. The texture of some vegetables? Maybe. Paula's not a fan of lima beans for that reason. Taste? Every vegetable is really an acquired taste. It took me 50 years to learn to like avocados—they're technically a fruit, as are tomatoes, but they're used like vegetables—but now they're a favorite.

I think people stop trying vegetables as they age; that's one reason the average adult eats two servings of vegetables per day when we really need four to six servings. Together with two to four servings of fruit, that gives us the eight to ten servings of vegetables and fruit we need to reduce our risk of cancer, heart disease, and diabetes.

It's time to change that. Stop acting like an old coot and start being more adventurous—try some new veggies. Don't whine. Don't complain. Just find a way to do it.

More on vegetables Wednesday.

What are you prepared to do today?

Dr. Chet

WGVU FM 88.5/95.3 npr Straight Talk on Health

Hear Dr. Chet's take on the latest health news and research—listen to Straight Talk on Health at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Eastern Time Zone on WGVU-FM 88.5 or 95.3, or listen live via the Internet by going to www.wgvu.org and clicking on "Listen Live" in the gray bar at the top.

The health information in this message is designed for educational purposes only. It's not a substitute for medical advice from your healthcare provider, and you should not use it to diagnose or treat a health problem or disease. It's designed to motivate you to work toward better health, and that includes seeing your healthcare professional regularly. If what you've read raises any questions or concerns about health problems or possible diseases, talk to your healthcare provider today.

Subscribe to the Message from Dr. Chet at DrChet.com — © Chet Zelasko PhD LLC